Tips for Finding Your Water Heater's Energy Factor (E.F.) or Standby Loss Rating

Note: some water heater manufacturers make this easier than others.

- Inspect your water heater and the printed materials that came with it.
- Ask your water heater supplier to provide you with the Energy Factor or Standby Loss rating.
- If you purchased a residential G.E. water heater from Home Depot, G.E. water heater information sheets, complete with E.F. ratings, are often available at the store's water heater display area.
- Visit the PUD's Conservation Department web page at www.clallampud.net/conservation
  - 1) Select the Rebate Eligible Water Heaters List link to obtain a listing of eligible water heaters by volume and manufacturer.
  - 2) Once you've found your water heater's listing, print that page and attach it to your rebate application.

Your PUD offers a variety of commercial/industrial energy efficiency incentives.
